Improvements for consideration

These are areas of concern that are typically associated with extreme scores on your most and least dominant personality dimensions. These may not all be applicable to you, depending on how pronounced your individual characteristics are.

Emotional Control

Managing through stress and anxiety may be challenging for you, and you may need more time to recover from difficult situations

Proactivity

Reacting to situations instead of getting out in front of them may give you less influence over their outcomes
Depending too much on others for help or guidance instead of taking the initiative yourself
